Hospital accreditation has become mandatory for all hospitals in India in order to be empaneled with insurance companies. Hospitals are therefore actively recruiting coordinators who have an understanding of the accreditation process to provide a framework for better patient care and quality improvement across all functions of the hospital.

Certificate Course in Hospital Accreditation

Accreditation is one of the methods by which any hospital can claim that the quality of their administrative and clinical care processes have been approved by a regulatory body. The Certificate Course in Hospital Accreditation at Healthcare Management Institute, KEM Hospital, Pune is for all graduates and diploma holders who wish to embark on a career in quality management in hospitals. It is also meant for working professionals in the health care sector who wish to further their career and improve promotion prospects.
